PROFILE

Currently Associate Fellow of the Institute for the History, Theory and Ethics of Medicine at the Johannes Gutenberg-University Mainz, Germany, before that Assistant Professor for the History, Theory and Ethics of Medicine (gender aspects) from 2005-2013. Kampf holds a PhD from Auckland and an M.A. from Cincinnati. She is the author of Mapping Out the Venereal Wilderness: STD and Public Health in New Zealand, 1920-1980 (LIT-Verlag, 2007), and co-editor of Aging Men, Masculinities and Modern Medicine (Routledge, 2013), and of a number of articles on the history of public health, aging, and gender in: Medical History, Health. An Interdisciplinary Journal, Body & Society, The Journal for the History of Sexuality, Medicine Studies, Critical Public Health, and Journal of Aging Studies.

Research interests lie at the interface of the history of science and medicine, body history and the impact of gender and aging on cultures of knowledge and medical practices, 19-20th century. Current research includes a book project on how the cultural, social, and political aspects shaped medical practices on male reproductive bodies ("Infertility and Fatherhood: Medicine, Society and Masculinities in West Germany, 1949-1989" (grant submitted to the German Research Foundation), a project on the impact of gender roles and prevention history ("Representation of gender and concepts of prevention of cardiovascular diseases in Germany, 1949-2000" (2011-2014, funded by the German Research Foundation), and a larger historical study on the conceptualisation of cancer control as a translational history "Translating risk to the public: constructions of cancer control at the interface of epidemiology, medicine and public health in transnational context since the 1940s" (grant submitted to the Wellcome Trust).
