The Else Kröner Forschungskolleg Mainz “From chronic inflammation to carcinogenesis: The importance of the liver microenvironment for the development and progression of liver tumors” and the Mainz Research School of Translational Biomedicine (TRANSmed) jointly offer a training program for young clinician scientists with a strong focus on translational research. The program is intended to provide a comprehensive platform for advanced training of highly motivated physicians dedicated to liver oncology.

The Else Kröner Forschungskolleg Mainz offers four positions for a Else Kröner Fellowship (TV-Ärzte UM Mainz, Ä1, 100%).

The fellowship has to be started in July 2020 and is available for three years. In the first year, the salary will be provided by the Else Kröner Fresenius-Stiftung. In the second and third year, the salary will have to be funded through the affiliated clinical department.

We expect:

- An excellent German state examination and an outstanding MD degree
- A strong commitment to a career in liver cancer research and medicine
- An integrative and cooperative personality
- A very good command of written and spoken English.

We offer:

- An individualized structured curriculum combining clinical training and research experience
- Courses in state-of-the-art research technologies and in transferable skills
- A comprehensive mentoring program with supervision by a team of advisors

The Else Kröner Forschungskolleg Mainz and TRANSmed are committed to equal opportunity and the compatibility of family and career. They therefore explicitly encourage applications from women.
